

Bring the Classroom to Life with Bees & Refugees School Workshops

Bees & Refugees partner with various schools and youth service organisations, exposing children to nature, biodiversity and food production, offering them a uniquely educational and exciting experience that brings to life what they learn in the classroom.

We actively support marginalised members of the local community, whatever their background or walk of life. We provide community-building and hands-on activities to young people to spur their interest in the environment, allow them to connect with their communities, and inspire innovative careers.

Beekeeping may seem like a very straightforward activity. However, this traditional practice has been documented to improve the well-being of individuals. Our beekeeping workshops offer you a unique experience in having a deeper connection to our world.

Who can be involved?

Primary school children through to secondary, including students experiencing a breakdown their schooling or personal life.

What will they learn?

Beekeeping, biodiversity, and the benefits they provide to the community and environment.

How will they learn?

- Tailored bee experiences to the needs of the students.
- Lessons delivered by our leaders who have immense depth of knowledge and passion for beekeeping.
- Highly engaging lessons delivered in an easy-to-understand, interactive format.
- Workshops including an introduction to beekeeping sessions, hands-on beekeeping, candle making and honey tasting.

Get in touch to find out more about school workshops at Bees & Refugees

About Bees & Refugees

Bees & Refugees is an environmental justice organisation introducing beekeeping as a therapeutic & community-building craft to refugee and local communities in London, whilst supporting the UK's native black bee population to flourish.